This negativity appears to stem from a perceived betrayal of the source material, with commenters expressing feelings of anger and disappointment. For instance, one user remarked, "She should embarrass is to choose blake instead of a proffesional person as Justin," indicating a sentiment that choices made in the adaptation process were misguided and detrimental to the film's potential success. This dissatisfaction suggests that fans are particularly sensitive to casting decisions that diverge from their expectations of beloved literary characters.

The discussions among commenters largely revolve around the casting choices for the film, with specific focus on Blake Lively's portrayal and her impact on the adaptation. Critiques extend to Colleen Hoover, with users like one named Ryan expressing frustration that the author's choices led to a compromised representation of the character Lily. The mention of Justin Baldoni, a character praised in the comments, reflects a desire for authenticity and fidelity to the original character's essence, further emphasizing the high expectations fans have for adaptations of their favorite books.

High-engagement comments reveal a pattern of strong emotional responses, primarily anger and disappointment, particularly towards the casting of Blake Lively. The comments like "She ruined it" and "shame on you Colleen" indicate a collective frustration that transcends individual preferences, suggesting a broader narrative of fans feeling let down by perceived missteps in adaptation.
